In village affairs, neither school nor municipal bodies have found it necessary to borrow, and sickness, which threatened seriously in other parts of the province, has not yet been a major character. As in the municipalities, relief has increased, not to really large extent. Next in importance to most affecting, especially under present conditions, is provincial administration, and it is no exaggeration to claim that never in the political history of Alberta last year occurred such a succession of disturbing and, it might be said, spectacular events in the presence of our citizens. The provincial administration of a different complexion than that of January, 1933, for, although Hon. Chas. Ross was replaced by Hon. N. Tanner before Xmas, 1932, three more cabinet ministers had been practically expelled from office last year since the following eight months, with the result that the portfolios of Lands and Mines, Prov. Treasurer, Agriculture and Attorney General were now in other hands than those which in the first Social Credit government had filled.

Not only the ministerial staff of affairs complete the tale of disruption. The third session of the Social Credit government was marked by a wave of resignations that threatened even the security of the premier himself; the situation being saved only by complete withdrawal of government from the hands of a created Social Credit Board. This necessitated a special session which opened Aug. 30 and was remarkable for the passage of three bills, viz: to license banks to license bank employees, and to close the courts for one session against the provincial government; these bills representing the advice of Messrs. Powell and Byrne, emissaries of Major Douglas. An attempt by the Prime Minister of Canada to submit this legislation to the Supreme Court of Canada was refused, and the bills were dissolved by Ottawa. This also created a crisis in S.C. credit affairs and a second special session became necessary, which opened Sept. 24, and which the result of disallowance was challenged.

The bank bills were amended to more extent, but a tax of over $2,000,000 was imposed and a Press Bill and an Alberta Credit Bill passed, all of which the Lieutenant Governor refused to sign. Tempers during the session were so high that the session was adjourned in haste. It was not until the following week that the session resumed, and the session was adjourned in haste. It was not until the following week that the session resumed, and the session was adjourned in haste.

Retrospect

Another year has passed into history and the opportunity comes to take stock of the various phases of our communal life, in addition to a brief glance elsewhere.

To many the most important topic is the state of agriculture, and it can be said that the Delia district has again experienced a disappointing year; indeed the estimated yield is now as low as 150,000 bushels, which is a grim indication of how badly our farmers have been hurt. The season opened auspiciously, ending starting about mid-April, and there was a heavy snow fall April 22. From that time, however, the weather was, for the most part, unfavorable, and a terrible start from June 2nd did nothing to improve conditions. By mid-July another crop failure was virtually announced, and although rains fell heavily in the last week of that month which did much to help grain and the feed situation, they were too late to save the major crop.

Furthermore, from Aug. 12 and 13 moved a real calamity, wiping out sections that, by reason of heavy soil, had without the worst effects of the drought. As it turned to excessive matters, rain actually hampered threshing operations, with the result that there was a heavy loss with respect to the grain. There are a few bright spots in the picture that should be mentioned; one is the grasshopper menace, which was not too serious this year, and another is the high price of wheat this season, which in fact has been that which has been anticipated, and another is the high price of wheat this season, which in fact has been that which has been anticipated, and another is the high price of wheat this season, which in fact has been that which has been anticipated.
